This conference is funded by the project RISK – Republics on the Stage of Kings. Representing Republican State Power in the Europe of Absolute Monarchies, late 16th - early 18th Century (ERC Starting Grant, Grant Agreement ID 758450, PI Alessandro Metlica)

Conference theme

In the past thirty years, several studies have been devoted to the political and cultural flowering of the republic of Genoa during the so-called 'siglo de los Genoveses', between 1528 and 1630, when Genoa became the hub of European trade and an important epicenter of artistic and literary production. Yet little attention has been granted to the cultural and economic crisis that followed or to how Genoese republican state power was represented during the long seventeenth century, especially in relation to neighbouring polities. To address this gap, the conference explores how the Genoese Republic shaped its political image between 1559 – the year of the publication of Oberto Foglietta's Delle cose della repubblica di Genova – and 1684, when Genoa was bombed by the French.

The conference, aimed at art historians, literary scholars, and political and cultural historians, strongly encourages a comparative approach, with a focus on the originality of the Genoese system of political representation in the European early modern context.
